Exploring Options Beyond Your Medical Plan

Overview

Prescription drug costs can vary widely depending on where and how you purchase them. While your medical plan's pharmacy benefit is a convenient option, it's not always the cheapest. Fortunately, there are several alternative ways to procure prescription medications that may save you money. This flyer highlights some popular and trusted options to help you find the best prices and make informed choices about your medications.

Alternative Solutions for Prescription Drugs

1. GoodRx

GoodRx is a widely used platform that compares prices at local pharmacies and offers coupons to reduce out-of-pocket costs. You can search for your medication online or via their app to find the lowest prices nearby. GoodRx works well for both generic and brand-name drugs and does not require insurance.

3. TrumpRx

TrumpRx is a direct-to-consumer (DTC) marketplace for patients to access discount cash pricing for certain products. Users can look at the list of available drugs or search for one they take. Then, the platform provides a coupon for use at a participating pharmacy or a link to the manufacturer website for direct purchase, depending on the drug.

Additional Strategies to Save

- Patient Assistance Programs (PAPs): Many drug manufacturers offer financial help for eligible patients.
- Manufacturer Coupons: Check if your medication has available coupons to reduce costs.
- Shop Around: Prices can vary significantly between pharmacies, including local and warehouse club pharmacies.
- Ask Your Doctor: Inquire about generic alternatives or samples to reduce initial costs.

Important Reminder! Always consult your healthcare provider before changing how you obtain your medications. These options can help you save money, but it's important to ensure your medications are safe and appropriate for your health needs. For questions or assistance, contact your benefits representative.

If any of these programs are used outside of your Rx plan, those dollars cannot be added to any accumulators.
